

TYPE 2 SAFETY HELMETS NOW AVAILABLE AT LGI

Across British Columbia and Canada, more major general contractors are now requiring Type 2 climbing-style safety helmets with chin straps on their projects.

This shift is not coming from a sudden regulatory change — it's being driven by Canada's largest construction firms and safety councils who are raising job-site standards based on injury data, insurance expectations, and modern work-at-height risks.

LGI is Stocked and Ready

To help our customers stay compliant and avoid site delays, LGI now carries Type 2 climbing-style helmets from a contractor-preferred brand:

FiberMetal — widely accepted on major projects across Canada

These helmets are CSA Z94.1 and ANSI Z89.1 certified, Type II rated, equipped with integrated 4-point chin straps, and available in electrical Class E or Class C options depending on application.

Why Contractors Are Making the Shift

Large construction firms are adopting Type 2 helmets to:

- Improve protection from lateral impacts and falls
- Ensure helmets stay secure when climbing or working at height
- Reduce injury severity and lost-time incidents
- Align with insurance and owner safety expectations
- Maintain consistent PPE standards across major projects
